TTI Performance Systems Promotes Robins to President

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (Sept. 28, 2007) – Jim Robins has been promoted to president of Scottsdale based TTI Performance Systems, Ltd. as Bill J. Bonnsetter, former president, will continue an active role as chairman of the board.

In Robins' new role, he will direct the company's daily activities and coordinate strategic plans for continued growth. In addition, Robins manages TTI's human resources, product support, information systems and marketing efforts. Since joining TTI in 2006 as vice president of distributor relations, Robins has played a vital role in product advancements, training initiatives and building a strong support team for TTI's network of Value Added Associates. "Jim completely understands TTI's culture, both externally and internally, and I feel very confident that he will maintain and improve upon that culture," said Bonnsetter.

Robins earned his bachelor's degree in nuclear medicine from University of Iowa. After many years of experience in nuclear medicine, Robins expanded his education with a master's degree in business and human resources from Keller Graduate School. As director of human resources/training and development in the medical industry, Robins utilized his education and experience to acquire many appropriate skills for his career at TTI.

TTI Performance Systems, Ltd., is the North American subsidiary of Target Training International (TTI).
